

A fresh attitude to legal matters

Surrey Hills Solicitors are approachable, accessible and committed to providing a first-class service

At the beginning of 2017 newly formed, four-partner strong, and aptly-named, Surrey Hills Solicitors moved into offices at 296 High Street, Dorking.

The bright, newly-refurbished offices decked with sleek furniture and funky artwork fit the firm's fresh attitude to providing legal services.

Surrey Hills Solicitors' main aim is to ensure that they are approachable and offer excellent service with clients being able to speak directly with the solicitors dealing with their matter.

The partners pride themselves on being approachable, accessible and committed to delivering a first-class service to their all clients, whether individuals or commercial entities.

While of course it is difficult to glamorise the more routine aspects of the law, Surrey Hills Solicitors are embracing change. For example, as we move further and further into the digital age they are challenging themselves to create a paperless office.

They appreciate that not all clients are the same, nor do they want to be treated the same, particularly when it comes to matters such as fees. Surrey Hills Solicitors endeavour to find a fee structure that works for each client, whether on a traditional hourly-rate basis or, as is becoming more popular, by offering fixed fees.

So who are Surrey Hills Solicitors?

The firm has a wealth of experience by way of its partners, who have all worked in the local vicinity for many years and live locally:

■ Rachael Anderson: Family law expert and mediator – Rachael provides clear, constructive and sensible advice on all aspects of family law and mediation. Rachael is a Law Society accredited mediator and member of Resolution.

■ Sarah Christmas: Residential and commercial conveyancing/property matters – Sarah has many years of experience dealing with all conveyancing and property-related issues for individuals, property developers, landlords, tenants and management companies.

■ Ian Davison: Local government and charities – Ian worked in local government for many years before transferring to private practice where he continues to deal with all aspects of local government law from governance to transactional work, often involving charities.

■ Kate Jackson: Dispute resolution and employment – Kate turns her hand to resolving all manner of disputes, including property, contracts, employment and landlord and tenant matters, as well as handling disputes for local authorities.

What do Surrey Hills Solicitors do?

The key areas of legal services offered are all manner of conveyancing and property work, family law and mediation, employment, dispute resolution and litigation, commercial and charity matters, wills and lasting powers of attorney.

The firm also specialises in the niche area of local government. Instructions range from straightforward to very complex and all are met with the same enthusiasm and professionalism.

In addition to providing legal services directly to the public, the partners also volunteer their services to charitable organisations such as attending clinics at Surrey Law Centre.

Not only is this part of the ethos of making legal advice more accessible but it is also reflects a genuine keenness to embrace being part of the local community.
